The fing presentation to the public schools at the tabernacle yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the P. O. S. of A. was attended by an interested audience, and but for the fact that the day was so theroughly occupied by other events, would no doubt have drawn a full house. H. A. Terpening presided. The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. David country. Its flag is our history. Utter, paster of the Unitarian church.

ance is good, and while some sneer at the efforts to elevate the masses none can object to the principle, for the masses compose the majority and must be lifted up. Good government means intelligence, and universal suffrage demands universal education. We must educate for safety and for economy, and the public schools are the only means to accomplish this end.

The public schools are here to stay—they are American institutions, and under the footing the stars and stripes. With one the only means to accomplish this end.

The public schools are here to stay—they are American institutions, and under the guidance of 30,000 Christian teachers, they cannot be overthrown. Many cannot or will not educate their children, and the fate of the future generations is wrapped up in the school. We believe that education should be a function of government, even if compulsory, for in our schools rests the future g.ory and prosperity of our nation, and by them can we know of the possibilities of our surroundings.

Human life demands a nome, for there only is to be found the true grain of patriotism. Teach your children to love.

The public schools are here to stay—they borns, standing on the deck of our steamer, I caught sight of a man-of-war floating the stars and striptes. With one loug and loud scciam I welcomed it, for it was a friend in the land of strangers.

in accepting the trust as president of the board of education, said: In behalf of the board of education and the pupils of the public schools I receive these flags and thank the donors and the Patriotic Order Sons of America, through whose instrumentality they have been secured. They will be preserved and placed over every school house, and under their folds the principles of love, devotion and patriotism will be inculcated, teaching all to be loyal in peace and laithful in war, even to the surrender of life itself in the defense of the flags.

REV. DR. ARNOLD.

I recall the feelings of one in a foreign land who after menths in the depths of the jungle forest, beholds the flag of his native land. It was a guide and protector in war, a shield to the traveler, and to the young must ever be an object of respect and love.

When wars are no more it will represent the progress, civilization and good government, and so let it float from every schoolhouse in the land.
